The Simple Truth About Reiki

Relaxing, nurturing, healing, comforting, soothing, loving are just a few of the words best to describe Reiki. Imagine being able to express yourself openly without fear of judgment or ridicule. This is all part of the Reiki experience.

When you first arrive for a Reiki session the practitioner takes time and talks with you. This is then followed by the actual session. You will be asked to lie on your back on a comfy table. You will be fully clothed with your shoes removed and if cold, a blanket is provided. The Reiki Practitioner's hands are placed at various positions on or over the body starting at the head and working down to the feet. There are as many as 12-20 hand positions. When finished with the feet you may be asked to turn over on your stomach (if you can) and the session continues. Again, starting at your head and ending once again at your feet. Your Chakras (ener-

- * Relieves pain and discomfort
  - * Relaxes and reduces stress
  - * Fosters natural self-healing
  - * Promotes personal awareness

How Often Do Kids Need Eye Exams?

Many people expect their vision to fade as they grow older. Such expectations are not unfounded, as the National Eye Institute notes that certain vision changes, including diminished vision and difficulty distinguishing colors, are a normal part of aging. But even children can experience changing vision, which only highlights the importance of kids receiving routine eye exams. Eye examination frequency depends on the age of the child and the condition of his or her eyesight at the time of each exam. The American Optometric Association has established these guidelines for pediatric eye examination frequency to help parents know when to get their youngsters' vision checked.

BIRTH TO 2 YEARS: Children in this age group whose physicians have deemed them asymptomatic of potential eye conditions or at low risk of developing eye conditions should have their eyes examined sometime between six and 12 months of age. Kids who may be at risk should adhere to the same schedule, though the AOA notes that exams for at-risk children may need to be conducted more frequently, even in this age group, than kids who are symptom-free. Eye doctors will speak with parents and recommend an eye exam schedule based on their initial examination.

3 THROUGH 5 YEARS: Children between the ages of three and five who are at low risk of developing eye conditions should have their eyes examined at least once between their third and fifth birthdays. The same goes for kids who are at risk, though doctors may recommend more frequent examinations for such youngsters.

6 THROUGH 18 YEARS: Whether they are at risk of eye conditions or not, children between the ages of six and 18 should have their eyes examined before first grade and annually thereafter. Youngsters who are at risk may need more frequent examinations as they get older.

Eye examinations are an important component of child health-care. By adhering to AOA eye examination guidelines, parents can ensure any vision problems their children develop are quickly caught and can be treated before they adversely affect youngsters' lives.
